

TC COOPER, ESQ.

TC is a kaleidoscope of all the things that have been birthed into her life. Coming from a large inspiring family with influential forces on both the maternal and paternal sides, she is a formidable example of the cause and effect of a nurturing family. Heavily inspired by the familial pull to do great things, she decided at a young age that faith, family, and focus were the key elements in anything that she aspired to do or be. This is reflected every time she puts her pen to paper to craft a literary tool or faith-based resource to help leaders in business experience abundant success.

TC has an interesting legal career that has included being a private equity attorney at a Wall Street law firm, providing expert legal counsel as deputy to the general counsel of a publicly traded luxury company, and also being a chief privacy officer and senior agency official in government. She is a graduate of Columbia Law School (Harlan Fiske Stone Scholar) and Hampton University (Honors College).

Economic empowerment is also important to TC. She has made it a priority to equip small business owners to successfully navigate the digital stratosphere. She is the president of Upward Action LLC—a social media education company that helps tens of thousands of leaders through social media and workshops use the power of social media and digital technology to increase impact, expand influence, and also diversify income—all while building legacy-building brands committed to excellence. TC is also a certified coach who was trained at Coach U.

Her faith is at the core of her “why” for diversifying her brand to include faith-based instruction. Often, in the workplace, one of the questions that believers ask is, “How can I exemplify my faith in the workplace?” As an answer to this question, she founded the FaithFocusFlow® Global Learning Center—where she helps business owners, executives, and managers around the world build sustainable success on bible-based principles and Christ-centered practices in marketplaces and industries.

TC has an impressive list of “firsts” on her resume, but she has yet to do the thing that she is most proud of because each new experience brings an extra dimension of amazement of God’s grace. She has been seen in publications that include Black Enterprise Magazine, California Bar Journal, New Jersey’s InBiz Magazine, the National Speaker Association’s Speaker Magazine, Productive Business Network, and the Washington Lawyer Magazine.

She is the author of the ALIGN Productivity Planner, Rooted in Faith 31 Day Journal, 52 Prayers for Christianpreneurs, 52 Lessons for Christianpreneurs, The Faithgineer, and other faith-based resources for business owners and leaders.

Her present-day passion, mission, and vision are summarized in the following statement:

“At the end of my days, if I consistently help leaders maximize the power of their faith and belief system to build Christ-centered business practices that serve ALL people, I will have done what I was born to do.” ~TC Cooper
